UFOs kidnap Hatchet staff (a disclaimer)

UFOs from outer space descended on campus this weekend and kidnaped the entire staff of The GW Hatchet, the University's student newspaper and a bastion of journalistic integrity for the last 80 years.

Before being beamed off campus, Hatchet Editor-in-Chief George M. "George" Bennett issued the following statement:

"The GW Hatchet's April 1, 1985 issue should not be taken seriously and is not written with any malicious intent. Dig it big."

Bennett could not be reached for further comment.

Good friends will give you a break when you're broke.

The dinner was sensational. So was the check. The problem is, the theater tickets that you insisted on buying broke your whole budget. Enough to declare bankruptcy by the time the coffee arrived.

A nudge under the table and a certain destitute look in the eye were enough to produce the spontaneous loan only a good friend is ready to make.

How do you repay him? First the cash, then the only beer equal to his generosity: Löwenbräu.

Löwenbräu. Here's to good friends.

Campus beat-off

Disaster struck for GW Junior S. DeGasperis last Tuesday. Blaming the mishap on "poor judgement and bad timing," DeGasperis lamented, "They're ruined. I'll have to buy a new pair entirely ... That's the last time I eat Saga chili." ●●●

"Why did the Mormon cross the street? To get to his other wife."

Jokes like this are pissing off the entire populace at Brigham Young University in the polygamy capital of the world, Utah. In response campus officials are starting a campaign to bring bad press to other groups, like Jews, Catholics, and Protestants.

Appearing at a press conference with his four wives, 13 in-laws and uncounted children, BYU's president, Purely Drugfree, told a series of jokes aimed at monogamous groups, (ie. almost the entire world). "Why did the guy with one wife cry at her funeral?—Because he wasn't going to get legally laid anymore."

"Who's next on the AIDS list?" Is this question plaguing your waking hours? Well, it should be, according to the entire faculty of Principia College in Illinois. Remember, this is the school that let its students die because it wouldn't allow them to get inoculations or treatment for measles.

Members of Auburn's Kappa Alpha fraternity, which hosts the Jefferson Davis and KKK barbecue and bake sale, asked the Vietnam Student Association to remove its 30 foot by 15 foot poster of Ho Chi Min from the front of its building because it "is offensive to real American ideals like freedom and equality."

GW president not seen in public; Rice Hallologists say change possible

GW President Lloyd H. Elliott has not been seen in public for six weeks and Rice Hall experts believe the leader of GW's gerontocracy may be ailing.

Elliott, who will be 67 years old next month, was last seen Feb. 18 when he reviewed the University's armed forces and new weapons at the annual George Washington's Birthday celebration.

Since then, however, those who study Rice Hall say there have been several indications of a possible change at the top:

- A chess match between two students at lunchtime in the Marvin Center second floor cafeteria was moved, mid-match, to one of the student's rooms in Crawford Hall.

- GW's delegation at the arms negotiations in Geneva left the talks yesterday. The official explanation was that the delegation was going to "dinner."

- GW's basketball team left the recent Atlantic 10 tournament at Rutgers University abruptly after the first round of play.

- GW radio station WRGW has not been on the air all semester.

- When a reporter for The GW Hatchet recently tried to contact Elliott by telephone, he was told that the President was in a "meeting" and unavailable for comment.

- If the first cut on Elliott's most recent LP, "Sgt. Lloyd's No Students Allowed In the University Club Band," is played backwards, University Provost William Johnson can be clearly heard saying "Raise my tuition, dead man."

Reagan of U.S., Elliott of GW at 1981 summit. Reagan later labeled GW "The Evil Empire" and criticized the University's hegemony over Pennsylvania Ave.

Editorial deadwood

GW sucks

Peeeeeeuuuuuuuuuu. What's that smell coming from between 19th and 23rd Streets and Pennsylvania and Virginia Avenues? Yuck. It's The George Washington University.

It's time to stop beating around the bush and start facing facts. GW sucks. All the students and professors here wish they were somewhere else. The ones who want to be here aren't worth knowing. Maybe it hasn't always been that way, but all the good alumni are dead now.

If that was all that mattered we wouldn't be so bad off. All our friends go to schools with distinguished faculty. But our professors' idea of a sabbatical is a year in the penitentiary. Our friends' classes are taught by professors who write books and make documentaries for PBS. Our classes are usually taught by grad students who can't speak English.

There's a lot of other stuff that's bad here too. There isn't a football team and the basketball team is no good. The ruling student government clique can't even fix an election right. We won't even begin to discuss the contract food service. There's never anything to do most weekends. And the weather hasn't been that great here like the people in Rice Hall promised. And there aren't any traditions here either, unless you count arguing over a pornographic movie every autumn.

This school is a joke. An expensive joke. And George Washington was pretty overrated as a president, as well.

Thank you.

Further study needed

While we admire the administration's initiative and hard work in seeking a solution to next year's expected housing crunch, we think their proposed remedy might warrant further study. On paper, it would appear that the idea of executing every third freshman is a wise, judicious, and efficient one. But let's not ignore some economic realities.

To begin, we must take into account one overriding fiscal reality: a decrease in the total amount of students enrolled in next year's freshman class is also a decrease in total amount of revenue for the University. Moreover, there exists a matter of principle: should a screw-up in the Housing Office dictate policy for the University at-large?

We also cannot help but to question some of the statistical methods employed by the University in arriving at the figure of every "third freshman." Even a first semester business student would be able to see that an extraneous variable could exist with respect to what the administration has termed, "the necessary extermination of a population consisting of a random sample divided by three." What if that sample is not an even multiple of three? Who picks up the slack?

Finally, there are the obvious procedural complications. The Housing Office's report, entitled "Avoiding the Crunch: the Easy Way Out," makes no mention of who is to foot the bill for the proposed executions. It would be a crying shame to have to witness needless cutbacks in funding for next year's Spring Fling, just because no one took the time to ask himself, "Is lethal injection more economical than a firing squad?"

In sum we think the Housing Office, under the watchful eye of Ann "Oh Yes She Can" Webster, has demonstrated a concern for the welfare of all students that was so noticeably absent earlier this year. Before "jumping the gun," however, we think it would be a wise idea to commission some further study.

New evidence: sky IS falling

Chicago. Catered cabinet meetings. Corruption at the JEC. Lies. The future. The deficit. Politics. CFG.

Enough of that.
Real news for Our Generation to worry about: Sky. Falling.

That's right. The sky is falling. This columnist has been likened in the past to the children's nursery rhyme character Chicken Little. Chicken Little, readers may recall, was hit on the head by an acorn and then was convinced that the sky was falling.

Everyone got a good laugh out of that one. They also laughed at Hitler. And at the Committee for a Future Generation. Hitler incinerated six million

Marc Worryin'

Jews. The CFG was tabled because of petty politics. Maybe marching into the Sudetenland is somebody's idea of a joke. Maybe scrapping a "Statement of Principles" for our generation which would get us on TV is somebody's idea of "chasing windmills." I think not. I think that history will be about as kind to those in the Student Association who killed the Committee on a Future Generation as it has been to Mr. Hitler.

That is not the point of this piece, however.

I may be buying a home in the area. The other day as I was strolling along 24th Street I was hit in the head. The sky was clear. No precipitation. No trees overhead, either. And no GWUSA members hanging out of windows waiting to take a shot at me like youths on a subway waiting for Bernhard Goetz. No. None of that.

It isn't just me either. Similar incidents happened on the same day to other members of Our Generation from Foggy Bottom to Port Huron. No plausible explanations exist. Except seven.

This columnist has never been accused of harboring conspiracy theories, but let it be entered into the record that when I asked Bob Guarasci about the mysterious falling sky, he replied: "It's very much a committee decision." And so this columnist searched the fourth floor of the Marvin Center for an explanation. Michael Pollack. Scratch that—Zeta Beta Tau fraternity brother Michael Pollack. Babak Movahedi. Ira Gubernick. Frank Farricker. Zeta Beta Tau brother Michael Sonnabend. Cathy Topper. Jim Schuler. Andrew Tenenbaum. The list could go on for three or four more names. It won't. The point is that nobody on the fourth floor of the Marvin Center, none of our leaders, none of the people we look to to guide Our Generation, would offer an explanation to this columnist about the falling sky.

Action is needed. By all of us. Now. It is bad enough that our elders will leave This Generation with a huge deficit and an even larger nuclear stockpile. That is unfortunate. But the fact that our own peers—the leaders of Our Generation—are conspiring against us is truly reprehensible.

Students! The Future is ours! Let's create it! Let's impeach all of the leaders of our student government and install a new one with Lisa Poskanzer in charge and me as office manager.

Letters to the editor

Frats reply

Please allow me to inform the GW community of all the positive things that fraternities do for this campus. Too often do I see articles and letters to the editor in The GW Hatchet that stress the so-called negative aspects of frat life, such as drinking, grain alcohol and torturing pledges.

Thus I think it only appropriate that I be allowed to utilize this space to elaborate upon the good things about fraternities, such as blood drives and poll watching at student elections. I am tired of only hearing about the bad things regarding the Greek way of life. It is about time that someone concentrated on the meaningful contributions that we frat brothers make to the social lives of all GW students.

Don't you think that everyone would rather read about the multitude of benefits that can be derived from participation in a fraternity? For example, what about blood drives? I think that we should look toward the brighter side of the Greek social structure, rather than always harping upon the darker side, such as alcohol poisoning and the beating up of pledges.

What about blood drives?
Thank you for allowing me to set the record straight.

Women reply

We are sick and tired of seeing women portrayed in a negative light in The GW Hatchet. Please allow us to utilize this space to inform the GW community of the more positive things that women do for this campus. Too often do we read about women whining, cracking gum, and claiming that pornography degrades and defiles them.

You suck

I can no longer remain silent. The journalistic standards of The GW Hatchet have been abysmal. You call yourself journalists?

You have demonstrated a total lack of knowledge with respect to the basic tenets of journalism, and especially the spirit of the first amendment. I propose that every news article, feature story, and letter to the editor criticizing a member of the GW faculty be approved through a central clearing committee of which I should be chairman. Only then will we be able to guarantee a truly free press.

You really suck

Won't you think that the editors of the Hatchet would be able to edit simple grammatical mistakes out of their issues. After all, don't you capitalist bastards make enough money to afford a proofreader? And when will you wussies realize that all you need to do to get a laugh is to print the word "fuck" 173 times an issue? You assholes better not change anything I wrote like you always do. You suck.

Herr Puck aus Karnten verwohnt Pam und Farrah

Hollywood, zweiter Tag. „Einen Tisch für heute abend?“ fragt der Besitzer des 80-Plätze-Restaurants „Chinois on Main“ ins Telefon und lacht aus vollem Halse. „Ausgeschlossen, versuchen Sie es bitte in vier Wochen.“

Der Gastronom hat gut lachen. Er heißt Wolfgang Puck und wurde wegen seiner gastronomischen Missionsarbeit in Los Angeles zum „Restaurateur of the year“ gekürt. Seine Lokale „Chinois“ und „Spago“, die er zusammen mit Lebensgefährtin Barbara Lazaroff „Wir heiraten am 20. Mai“ betreibt, laufen wie die Feuerwehr.

Für den gewöhnlichen Sterblichen jetzt bei den „Oscars“ nach einem Tisch zu fragen ist ebenso sinnlos wie zu den Olympischen Spielen im Sommer. Im Land der besten Steaks, der größten Hummer und saftigsten Maiskolben hat der vor zehn Jahren nach Amerika ausgewanderte Karntner Puck (die Amerikaner sagen leider „Pack“) neue Essenskulturen eingeführt. Den gastronomischen Feinschliff erwarb er übrigens im Pariser „Maxim's“.

Als er sich am Sunset Boulevard mit dem „Spago“ selbständig machte, strömte die Schickleria von Los Angeles herbei. Barbara Streisand, Victoria Principal, David Bowie, Billy Wilder, Helmut Berger, Farrah Fawcett, Andy Williams, Warren Beatty, Johnny Carson sind Stammgäste.

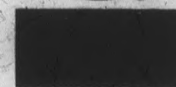

Gemüse vom chinesischen Onkel

In Pucks „Chinois“, wohl einziges chinesisches Lokal ohne chinesisches Koch, nimmt man alle Überraschungen in Kauf. Offen sagt Wolfgang Puck, der den Reklame-Nerv von Paul Bocuse und ein bisschen die Herd-Sensibilität von Eckart Witzigmann hat: „Ich liebe chinesisches Essen, und dieses Restaurant ist für mich der beste Weg, es richtig zu lernen.“

Er scherzt. „Das Schönste ist auch, daß niemand genau das chinesische Essen kennt. Man kann einige Ungereimtheiten überspielen und auch einiges dazu erfinden: O ja, das Gemüse kommt direkt aus einer Provinz in Asien, wo mein Onkel lebt.“

roommate, a.k.a.

THE ANTICHRIST

by Chip "Tim" Landes

Like most college freshmen, my first year at an institution of higher

THE ANTICHRIST!!!

I'd be lying if I said I never had any portension of this before I got to GW, but, like the male howler monkey who's mate deceitfully picks all the lice, insects, and termite-infested bark out of his fur only to dine on them herself, I just couldn't put two and two together. I can remember my first clue, which occurred to me as I was boarding the train in my home state of Oklahoma bound for GW. As I hopped onto the departing caboose I heard my mother say, "Remember to dress warmly, eat regularly, and brush your teeth. Oh, and Tim," she remembered, "make sure your roommate isn't... THE ANTICHRIST!!!"

My first introduction to THE ANTICHRIST (we'll call him Max) came when I had just lugged my four suitcases and very heavy sailor's trunk up the eight flights of stairs to my room (the elevator was, unfortunately, not working). I had just made it to the top of the stairwell when Max, wearing a black and red suit with his everpresent pitchfork in hand, kicked all my luggage, including the trunk, down the eight flights of stairs with such a hideous and resounding scream as to make me urinate in my pants.

"Sorry," he said, "I thought you were someone else."

Despite his obsession with geometry (he was very fond of the pentagram) and math (once he stayed up three days developing 666 calculus equations that had a solution of 666) Max and I got along fairly well. Since he spent hours trying to comb his hair over the two small horn-like protrusions on his forehead we had some of the usual roommate squabbles over the bathroom.

"Max," I remember saying to him once, "you've been in there for two and a half hours and I just can't hold it any longer. Can you please let me in?"

Max opened the door a crack and exposing his viper-like fangs (he had the worst bridge work and always made a scene when he ate steak) he spat out in an utterly inhuman voice, "If you do not leave I will wedge this Lysol can in your face and cast you upon the fires of hell."

Even still, it wasn't until Halloween that we had our first real falling out. At dinner that night in the Dorothy Floyd Heck Ernest Angley Marvin Center Cafeteria, after saying grace (he always said his in Latin tongues), Max assured me that the biggest rage in Halloween costumes this year was to dress as patio furniture. So, being the gullible sort I am, I let Max dress me as an entire patio set with heavy cast iron chairs strapped to my arms and a large table draped on my back.

Fear and loathing at GW

by Buster S. Thompkins

It was about midnight when the drugs started kicking in. We had been holed up in some anonymous dormitory room with the sounds of youngsters copulating in the next room. I turned to my attorney and said, "I feel a little bit woozy... I think we better take a cab to the place." As he turned to look at me the room became engulfed with thousands of giant pterodactyls. I yelled, "Where did these animals come from?"

The room became quiet again. My attorney was absentmindedly pulling his chest hair out from the roots with a needle-nose pliers. I knew it was time for the action to begin. We had been assigned by the features section of The GW Hatchet to write a piece on the college social scene. Flung headlong into the living arrangements of the future of America, we had decided it was the ultimate opportunity to participate in pure Bonzo journalism.

It had started earlier in the afternoon when we had blown in from the outskirts of Southern Maryland in a '67 Chevy Malibu with the strains of Twisted Sister blaring through the car's spent stereo speakers. We had been given $500 by the editor for our expenses. The laundry list goes something like this: three bags of dope, 35 pellets of mescaline, two sheets of blotter acid, five vials of Colombian cocaine, an ounce of angel dust, a quart of Old Oak rum, a case of Budweiser, "the king of beers," a quart of tequila, and a dozen hits of amyl nitrate. It was good enough for the weekend.

Obtaining the drugs had been a problem of sorts. Hearing that the District had open markets for the sale of illegal substances we found ourselves in the bowels of Southeast Washington surrounded by large Negroes with tire irons. Not willing to play the Clint Eastwood role, we gave them all the money and

INTERVIEW: GW profs and why they're here

In an effort to further the understanding between the GW community and its faculty, The GW Hatchet briefly interviewed a number of GW's most renowned professors.

Berny Teardroff, business professor

Q: If you know so much about business how come you aren't out making a killing on Wall Street?

A: Well, the answer to that is simple. In other words it's really very clear. If one were to consider the amount of time required in each case to accommodate the proper interest or move beyond what had previously been asserted then really it's just plain as day. And besides the economy isn't headed that direction anyway.

Dr. Clarke Horton, journalism professor

Q: If you know so much about journalism how come your not working for an important newspaper?

A: Well, I'll plead the fifth. No, seriously, geez, that's a damn good question. Yeah... And good questions are important too. I could tell you about a lot of great interviews ruined because the wrong questions were asked. Like that Playboy thing with Jimmy Carter. Remember that. Ruined. Because of the wrong questions. It was ruined, wasn't it. I don't know. Anyway, there you have it.

Coach Chuck "Moose" Cleat, basketball coach

Q: If you're such a good coach what are you doing at GW?

A: Losing. From now on for every question you ask I'm going to knock out a tooth.

Dr. Lutz Heinrichstein, physics professor

Q: If you know so much about physics, why are you teaching at GW?

A: Fools! Fools! You are all idiots! Can you not see? It is as clear as the nose on your face. As clear as the insidious little smile on your lips. I am developing devices most people are too terrified to even think of and you laugh and mock me. I will show you. I will show you all. I can control the weather. Ha Ha Ha Ha. You will all see. You will all pay. Ha Ha Ha Ha.

Dr. Otis Spaghn, TV production professor

Q: If you know so much about TV production why are you teaching at GW?

A: Hell, man, I've been looking all over for a school like GW. You see, man, I barely got out of grammar school. And, like, I've been looking all over for a group of students dumb enough to make me feel like I graduated Princeton with honors.

Dr. Juan Marachal, biology lab professor

Q: If you know so much about biology why are you teaching at GW?

A: Lo siento, señor. No entiendo. Mira, señor, no hablo ingles

Dr. Lydia Spacetrek, travel and tourism professor

Q: If you know so much about travel and tourism how come you're not leading the easy life on some Puerto Rican beach?

A: Well, I could if I wanted but I don't want too. Because teaching is important to me. Who wants a million bucks when you can show someone else how to get it. Make sense. Ha. Get it. sense, cents. Get it.

Dr. Tracy Menditez, philosophy professor

Q: If you know so much about philosophy why are you teaching at GW?

A: Wow, man. Heavy. I mean why are any of us anywhere.

Dr. Floyd Heck Marvin, Dean of GW

Q: If you are such a good dean why are you at GW?

A: Well, you know Jerry Ryan, the dean at Harvard. Well, he used to be dean here and I was at Harvard. Anyway, we played this card game see. And I lost, you see, and...

Don't Ask The GW Hatchet

I have heard that there is another student-run paper on campus besides The GW Hatchet which is perhaps even more controversial, presents news in a different light, and gives air to what the students are really thinking. Apparently this alternative paper is not adverse to printing good poetry and original ideas and, like all good underground papers, is frequently at the cutting edge of the current campus and national issues while not having to resort to ridiculous sensationalism and false rebellion. Help me out. I can't remember ever seeing such a paper around. Does it really exist?

No. No such paper as you describe exists at this University.

I have heard from my philosophy professor that in much the same way as a tree which falls in a forest devoid of people can make noise, it is possible for a group of individuals who are both illiterate and incapable of free thought to produce a written product. How is this possible? Are there any examples of this having ever been done?

It is possible. Look at the Sequent.

Look man, you've got to help me quick, man. I mean now. I'm really serious. My friend Bobby just took 12 of these Preludin pills—they're like these orange things man—and lost consciousness. I'm really scared man. I'm like, I don't know what to do. He's never done this before man, and now he can hardly breathe. Seriously man, I don't want to call the cops but he looks real bad. I'm really, really scared. Please tell me what to do. Please.

Wow, 12 preludins! That sounds pretty bad. He might die or something. I think I'd... Gee, I just don't know. Sorry I can't help you. Write next week, maybe I'll be able to think of something.

Recently my roommate (we'll call him Tral Faz) committed suicide by jumping out of our eighth story window with a noose wrapped around his neck, stripped live electrical wire wrapped around his naked body, and in the process shooting himself with a .44. Incidentally, he had just drank a voluminous solution of Tylenol, ammonia, and axle grease. As a result I come to question the value of life and our (you know, the human race's) purpose on this planet. I turn to Ask The GW Hatchet as my last desperate solace before doing something rash. What should I do... Please, don't make fun of me.

Hang it up loser.

Why do you constantly belittle those who ask intelligent questions in the name of knowledge, seldom answer questions completely or correctly, litter your column with typos, and imitate Cecil Adams? Also, why are oranges orange?

The common North American orange derives its characteristically orangish hue from the chlorophyll III (most plants have chlorophyll II) present directly under the mantle of the peel. While the orange is not the most efficient photosynthesizer in nature, it more than makes up for this evolutionarily by being attractive and eye catching and therefore circulating its seeds widely. Now, blow it out your ass.

The newspaper had arranged for us to live in a dormitory room for the weekend. Having lost all the money in our earlier illicit transaction, we called up the editor to arrange some more spending money for our stay. He was none too pleased when we explained that we had been robbed at gunpoint by a GW student. Nevertheless we were instructed to go to Rice Hall, where a check would be waiting for us in the cashier's office. Winding our way through the environs of the University's administrative offices proved to be quite challenging considering our present alcohol intake level. We found our way to the third floor and the cashier gave us the check, no questions asked. Where but on a college campus could a strange woman give two unknown men a check for $300 with no questions asked? We were beginning to like the place.

The dorm room where we were to do our work proved quite interesting. Aside from the asbestos insulation and lead paint chips peeling from the ceiling it was a pretty nice place. Before we actually experienced the nightlife it was necessary to get a feel for the campus environs. First we loaded up on a few sheets of the acid to get our brain cells functioning.

We had been told the Marvin Center was the place for most of the student activities. The ground floor of the place was taking on a purplish hue as we walked near the vending machines. My attorney commented, "What a diverse college community." A young woman approached me and I realized her head was taking on the configuration of a Peruvian llama. Her cloven hooves reverberated against the linoleum as we approached the bookstore. I said, "You know there's nothing worse than a woman who doesn't shave."

Having had enough of the student center, we returned to our room with the events of the early morning echoing in our depraved minds. As we climbed the nine floors to our room, the elevator being a victim of some Communist plot, we met a young coed who had just returned from a shopping spree at Fiorucci's. "What do you have in the bag, honey?" She replied, "Oh, it's the latest thing in New Yawwk." I immediately punched her in the mouth, sending her reeling down several flights of steps. Indiscriminate violence has always been the answer to most social problems.

We went to the room and decided to catch up on some well-needed rest. My attorney advised me of my rights in regards to the previous physical assault. "No problem, I've heard physical assaults on women here go unreported." I breathed a sigh of relief as I stripped to my shorts.

Some five hours later we awoke and began preparing for the night out. "Where's the hookah?" I asked. "How the hell would I know," came the response. "You're the doctor of journalism." "No matter, hand me ten pellets of the mescaline." I gulped them down with a swig of the tequila.

"Whew, that's what I call the key to the highway." Having been advised that the main action was to be found at some local tavern called Odd's we ventured forth towards the godforsaken place. We walked by a large neon display that looked like it belonged in Times Square. My attorney, never one for the bright lights and big city, heaved a large brick through the front display window. "That will teach those record company bastards to stop making those crappy albums with those androgynous faggots on the covers. I want manly music like AC/DC, Iron Maiden, Dokken, Queensryche, and the soundtrack from 'Spartacus.'" I nodded in agreement while stepping over a bum who had just urinated in my path.

As we approached the cafe on the warm, slightly muggy night, the sounds of the collegiate nightlife filled the air. "What's your major?" I knew it wasn't going to be pleasant. As the drugs took hold a pleasantly warm feeling invaded my brain and the atmosphere became bathed in a sinister glow.

We immediately made our way to the bar and were accosted by what appeared to be two college nymphomaniacs. I turned to my attorney and said, "Is this what these college kids are learning these days?" He shrugged his shoulders as the girls' boyfriends advanced on us. Their menacing glares gave us the indication that they weren't going to tolerate any outsiders, particularly ones without fraternity pins, stealing their women. We responded by saying that we had no intention of taking your girlfriends. They returned to their seats; girlfriends in tow, and you could tell they were talking about us. I knew we were in bad shape, my paranoia was rampant.

Having had our first encounter with college nightlife we took our drinks and began to observe the behavior of the students. An altered state of consciousness always brings profundity. We weren't privy to the intimate conversations of the students, but it appeared the conversation were largely about sex. No actual talking about sex, just a whole hell of a lot of intimating about it. I figured it would be great to spike the drinks with purple microdot to hear what these kids really are about. Enough of my insane ramblings. As the night wore on, it got increasingly more hallucinatory.

Our state of mind was degenerating quickly by 2 a.m. What we had hoped would be a piece about the new generation of American college kids and the American dream had ended in a shattered nightmare of a drug induced haze. We decided we would return and blow the place up.

As we left the bar, the two guys who had been offended by our uncollegiate behavior decided to give us some trouble. Picking up a large Jack Daniels bottle, an answer to most of society's problems, I calmly smashed both of these young men in the skull and left the premises. Feeling like a Hunter S. Thompson of the '80s, a Man on the Move, I walked confidently into the night air and felt violently ill.

Our last unauthorized med school photo spread ("Ross Hall houses body parts," Nov. 8, 1984) made such a big splash that we persuaded Managing Editor Paul "Mr. Fuck You" Lacy to try his luck in Ross Hall again.

Looking over these unauthorized photos, we're really expecting to hear it from the GW community all over again, although even we doubt whether we'll be able to match some of the rave reviews we got last time round:

● Paul Lacy's "actions are contemptible and make a mockery of the humanitarianism of those who

-Med school classes of 1987 and 1988

● "Printing those two photographs (especially the one on the front page) is classless and extremely disrespectful."

-Daniel Underbarger

● "Regrettable and worthy of apology."

-GW Committee on Student Publications

● "Appears to be part of a pattern."

-Dr. Michael Jackson

We couldn't agree with Dr. Jackson more. Submitted for your approval, it's...

JAPS

MON.

Hey, tonight you have two options depending on whether you want to pretend you're intelligent or good looking. If you want to pretend you're smart than hot action tonight is at the Gelman Library fourth floor "fish bowl." If you study in the corner you'll be able to hear Mindy and Jessica talk about JAG sweat pants and your favorite fluorescent colors. Tonight's special topic is, "Stripes: do they make you look fat?" And lastly, if you want to pretend your pretty, you can get a midnight cut at Bogarts.

TUE.

Crazy ZBT Little Sisters gathering going on tonight. Remember to hit Thurston's eighth and ninth floors before heading off to Dominiques for that late night meal. Hey, don't forget, no $100 meal ever tastes good unless you make the proper Ethiopian jokes while you're eating it. Big test tomorrow—better figure out how to cheat on it! OK, it's getting old but there's also the AEPi party at Whispers.

WED.

If you're a real JAP then you don't need us to tell you that Wednesday night is synonymous with the Sexchange. Get it, Exchange, Sexchange. Ha. Can you believe you still laugh at that. Hey, how about that Jamie's abortion. Will she do anything to blow a few bucks or what? And what could be more fun than getting drunk on Kamakazi's—you've got it, pretending you're drunk on kamakazis. Look, doesn't Marc look cute at the end of the bar in his Guess jeans? Don't try talking to him though; you see he hasn't learned how to speak yet. It's getting trendy, but you're still allowed to go to Mr. Henry's for strawberry daiquiris. But, please don't tell anyone we said it's OK.

PICK

Because of the fact that you have little conception of time (unless you realize that time is money) we'll point out to you that the

ROBOTICS

There are currently senior positions available at grades 13, 14, and 15 in Computer Science, Electronics Engineering, and Mechanical Engineering. Salaries are competitive and based on professional experience and accomplishments. ($37,599 - $67,940)

These positions are part of the NBS team working to implement intelligent and flexible robots for a wide variety of applications. Some specific tasks are:

- design of new sensor systems
- sensory processing systems
- world modeling databases
- world model interpretation
- robot manipulators
- robotic assembly
- CAD directed assembly
- real-time control systems
- artificial intelligence algorithms for robotics
- robot programming languages
- robot simulation including real-time graphics
- specific robot applications including: military, manufacturing, construction, and space
- robot performance enhancement
- robot standards

Our program in robotics already has had significant impact on the U.S. application of robots. We have the best equipment for research in robotics, including a full scale experimental factory dedicated to research in industrial automation. If you would like to be part of this major effort to help revitalize U.S. industry, please contact Dr. Leonard S. Was Geo. Washington gay?

by Karol Wojtyla
Controls the media

Was the father of our country a "flaming" homosexual? First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen? An angry citizens group thinks so, and it plans to petition the GW Board of Trustees to have the name of the University changed.

The GW Hatchet has learned that at the Board of Trustees meeting last month a letter from a group calling itself Neighbors Organized For Abolishing Gays (NO FAGs) presented "new evidence" that Washington was "definitely a little queer if not, in fact, a complete, flaming faggot."

Sources close to the situation said the University commissioned a team of experts to investigate the charges. Neither the University nor E.B. Ohpomoh, head of

NO FAGs, would comment on the investigation.

Ohpomoh was willing, however, to discuss some of his "evidence" that Washington was a homosexual.

"First, the guy lived to be—what?—50, 60 years old. But he didn't have any children. That seems just a little strange, doesn't it?"

The celebrated crossing of the Delaware, according to Ohpomoh, was "nothing more than a guy in silk stockings and a wig joyriding on an all-male cruise."

"And Valley Forge—big deal. Sure old Georgie lasted out the winter with plenty of hearty young men to keep him warm," Ohpomoh commented.

Ohpomoh said NO FAGs wants GW to change its name to "something a little more manly, a little more virile, a little more masculine." NO FAGs claims that if GW doesn't comply, it can coerce donors to withhold millions from the University.

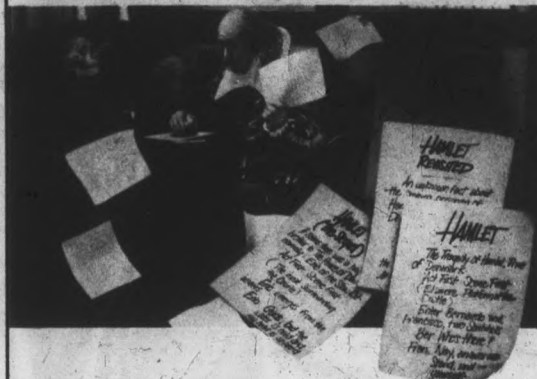

GW's Gay People's Alliance issued a statement last week denouncing Ohpomoh as "nothing more than a crazy homophobe."

"They've got it all backwards if they call me a 'homophobe,'" Ohpomoh replied.

SHAKESPEARE NEVER KNEW PILOT PEN.

He wrote beautifully without our
but imagine what he might have written with them.

You may not be a Shakespeare but with a Pilot Razor Point there's no telling what you could do. The Razor Point's durable plastic point conveys every word in a smooth, thin unbroken flow. Express your individual personality with every stroke. Only 98¢.

GENERAL KNOWLEDGE: "What is going on here?"

"Hi, Craig," Chris says, "I think I'll leave." Chris goes into the bathroom to get dressed and Craig starts on Lisa asking her why. She tries to explain that she needed someone to talk to and Chris was around. "There's a big difference between talking and..."

"One thing led to another. We'd been drinking. Craig, I'm sorry."

"Sorry, my foot."

"Well, you're one to talk. Out with another girl when I needed you. Where were you when I needed you?"

Craig does know what to say so he turns and leaves. Lisa bursts into tears. Chris tries to comfort her, but she tells him to leave.

The next day lunch is tense. Dave is upset with himself. He hasn't seen or spoken with Michele since their fight. Craig and Chris are not speaking, and Lisa is nowhere to be seen. Carol stops by the table to say hi and ask Craig if she will see him tonight. Craig makes a date and Carol leaves.

Just as they are all leaving for class, Ashley runs in. When they ask what's wrong, she responds after catching her breath, "It's Michele, she collapsed after class. They took her to the hospital. I think she's misdiagnosed."

WILL MICHELE LOSE THE BABY? WHAT WILL HAPPEN BETWEEN HER AND DAVE? AND WHAT ABOUT CRAIG, CHRIS, AND LISA? KEEP READING. WE'RE NOT DONE YET!

Original photos touting Brown as "The New Building C" reveal that the GW center's height does not come close to that of the Washington Monument.

by David Oscar Gerry's Favorite Kid

Basketball star Mike Brown, pictured on the GW media guide as a 600-foot giant who dwarfs the Washington Monument, is actually much shorter than the 555-foot obelisk and most other national landmarks, The GW Hatchet has learned.

The picture and Brown's billing as "The New Washington Monument" are the results of a hoax perpetrated by the Smith Center.

GW Director of Sports Information Doug Gould and other public relations henchmen conspired to superimpose a negative of Brown onto a negative of the Monument to create the illusion that Brown stands well over 600 feet tall.

The GW Hatchet has learned that the photographic legerdemain was used as an attempt to cover up a botched promotional campaign touting Brown as "The New Building C." GW Men's Athletic Director Steve Bilsky vetoed the idea and had all the pictures of Brown leaning on the six-story building destroyed except for one photo which found its way to The GW Hatchet's offices.

Smith Center officials were tight-lipped about the issue Friday. Bilsky said he knew nothing about the Building C photos. Gould allowed that the GW center may not be taller than the Washington Monument, but said he was "much taller" than the U.S. Capitol and laughed at the idea of comparing Brown's height to any of the buildings in Foggy Bottom.

"There was no photo hoax here ... I don't think much of anything happened," GW basketball coach Gerry Gimelstob commented.

Need to leave town quick for "personal reasons"? Beginning next semester you can do it in style with GW Basketball Team Luggage.

Director of Sports Marketing Director Manny "About those complimentary tickets, Gerry" Rosenberg announced the idea last week, saying the athletic department hoped to cash in on the number of players who have transferred from the basketball team over the past few seasons.

The complete set of luggage, which costs $250, includes the Tim Dawson garment bag, the Bernard Woodside tote bag, the Ron White carry-on and Oscar Wilmington, Steve Perry and Terry Silas pullmans.

Sports briefs

Rosenberg said the luggage will not be available until next semester to accommodate players transferring from the team after this year. A Gerry Gimelstob steamer trunk might also be added to the set, Rosenberg said.

Cardinal John Joseph Krol of Philadelphia scattered six hits to lead the College of Cardinals to a 7-0 victory over GW yesterday at the Vatican. Cardinal Joseph Bernadine knocked in three runs with a four-for-five performance at the plate. Patrick Boyle of New York and William Baum of Rome had two RBI apiece for the Cardinals.

On Saturday, GW had an easy time against Electoral College, defeating them 13-2. GW Coach John Castleberry said he thought the Electoral College may have been overconfident following its 525-13 victory over Walter Mondale.

GW basketball coach Gerry Gimelstob advanced to the quarterfinals of the GW Golden Gloves championship when he TKOed Young Americans for Freedom Chairman Andrew Dudek Saturday night in Gimelstob's office.

Gimelstob, who defeated Manny Rosenberg to earn the right to fight Dudek, will be pitted against heavyweight champ Bob Guarasci in the next round.

The Gimelstob-Dudek match was marred by infractions by both fighters. Gimelstob attempted to strangle Dudek, but told the referee that his hands "ended up" around Dudek's neck when Dudek pointed his finger in his face. Dudek was accused of bringing a foreign object into the fight when he brandished a .45 caliber pistol.

Both Gimelstob and Dudek denied that the fight occurred.
